I have a few friends who are in worse shape than I am and I've seen plenty of people with a lot of bruises and I'm concerned that I have a lot of them myself. Therefore, I decided I would remedy the problem of having lots of bruises the easy way: I would apply a healing gel to the problem areas of my body. First and foremost, I am very impressed with how the aquaphor works on me: It doesn't seem to dry out the skin anywhere, which means it won't blister and if I get a cut, the gel stays where it is and stops it from getting infected. I think there is quite a bit of snow going on in our parts and I thought this would be a suitable time to try an aquaphor cream – so here is my verdict. A little review of the packaging: The packaging is nothing fancy, but it is not so bad either. The aquaphor cream comes in a white tube with a simple yet pretty pattern on the top, a clear gel and information about the cream.
