Jack the Ripper, AKA "the Whitechapel murderer," or "the legendary figure of Victorian-era London." Jack the Ripper is back! The Whitechapel murders. London of the 19th century. Jack the Ripper. Three words that strike terror in the hearts of modern audiences the world over. Yet despite the horror of the crimes committed by the notorious murderer, the city of London is once again bracing itself for the cold-blooded killing it knows only too well all too well. It is your job, as the newest occupant of the world's most prestigious organisation for forensic analysis: Ludens Finegan, Jack the Ripper Expert Investigator, to attempt to solve these crimes! "The Ripperologist" is an Ace Attorney spin-off/visual novel, and your new case will consist of a case of murder in London, England. Character selection is made possible with more than 50 different classes, as well as your own custom class. Whether you're after more direct gameplay or a visual novel/puzzle game approach, there's something for everyone with this game. The game uses both a "pause-time", in-which you can make your own decisions (like Ace Attorney games), and a "play-time", in which the story is presented to you (like visual novels). It features both a PS4 and a Switch release. Game Overview

What's new in Anime Puzzle:

There are no more heroes in movies or on television. We are fucked. The little slackers and wannabes took over your genres, replaced good heroes with future criminals and screwed them all out of jobs and glory and all our money's worth, and now even the pretty girls have either turned into psycho killers or addicted ball busters. At any rate there's no heroes worth watching anymore except pop stars. Maybe if you're lucky, you'll look at the pretty faces on crack and feel even worse, but usually you'll fall for the youngest and the prettiest, and get all excited about another schmuck taking all the credit for what you did. Really, all you have is clubs, and the drunk uncles that came before you - masturbation to many people's standards, but it beats the hell out of you. You have no one. And all it takes is a kid with a gun to suck all your hope away like that. And who was I to think that the kids were safe? The way I grew up there was never any choice. I saw uncles going to work carrying beer kegs for a lousy nickel an hour on Friday night. They came home, each one of them carrying one gallon of vodka and enough whiskey and wine to kill a family of three in five minutes. By the time they were laid in bed, they were already dead. Maybe the sludge didn't come out until Saturday, but we never caught the crooks - and even if we had, the swill we sold every day would have drowned out the scent of heroes without even making a dent in the mortgage. I was used to that by the time I was nine. I didn't even think about it anymore; you get used to all kinds of shit. No one even told me about the horrors of Napa, and if they did, I was so doped up that I wouldn't be able to remember. What were we talking about? But now? We're fucked, and fucked like never before. I have your wife here and one kid, and it just goes to show you that everyone's a hero. Anyone can be a hero. They just need the right magic potion, and it's as easy as can be to be a hero. Anyone who makes himself popular enough, or powerful enough, or rich enough to be a hero is a hero. It's not a reason, it's just a reason. An excuse for him to be a hero. I think it's even easier Strategy is the foundation of Frozen Cortex, a PC strategy game that imagines what the beauty of two timeless sporting forms - board-game strategy and the modern sports video game - might look like if they were blended together. In Frozen Cortex, players are tasked with re-imagining sport by combining the broad appeal of board-game strategy with the depth, nuance and aggressive tactics of video game strategy. Players take control of sports franchises and build teams, facilities and cultures. Players use game mechanics and tools to create and compete in real-time, multiplayer 3D leagues. Construct thousands of variations of each sport to advance and compete in tournament-style runs, resembling the thrill of playing thousands of different combinations of sports moves in a video game. The Physics Engine is a timed resource that decays over time. Using the Physics Engine, dynamic and emergent rules based on game balance create complex strategies for the game to play itself. These emergent rules reward better players and reward more aggressive play. Players can also compete in these Time-Stretched Leagues, which consume time in a way not normally possible within the traditional game of three or four-minute sporting events. Time-stretched games are realized using the Physics Engine and combine intricate strategy and depth with game speed.
